Åland golf

VIKING LINE

Quiet moments on the green at dawn

Crisp dawn air. The first tentative morning rays. A dark silhouette of an early bird golfer with club raised, swinging in the drowsy sunlight. Meanwhile, the glittering, cool blue Slottsundet lies in the background, languidly extending its rippled watery wings. Atop the hill in the distance sits the old stone castle, the only medieval fortress in Åland, and the wind whispers of the remarkable tales and people who have passed through it over the centuries.

There are few times more treasured by dedicated golfers than these tranquil morning hours, and many of them eagerly rise early to enjoy the green at dawn. But the combination of Åland's geographical location and its presence in the eastern time zone mean that it stays light here much later in the evenings than what most visitors are used to.

Of course, things like well-maintained golf courses, excellent service, challenging holes and pleasant restaurant facilities are at the top of most golfers' wish lists – but doesn't it help to have a magnificent view as well?
